A train leaves St. John to-day for the Joggins, Cumberland county. The Joggins railway company enables us to say that St. John does what no other city in the Dominion can do. It turns out a train, consisting of an engine, tender and three cars, including a passenger car, all being the work of private firms. Government or corporation works in other cities can do this, but nowhere else can it be done by private firms. In the present instance the locomotive was constructed by Fleming & Son and the cars by James Harris & Co.—[St. John Sun.
